Federal Communications Commission

Dear Mr. Wheeler:

It is the public comment period relating to Net Neutrality and I am one member of the public.

I don't understand much about Net Neutrality but I am unequivocal about the fact that the airwaves are part of the public commons and they are a gift of the people to the private corporations who use them and provide our viewing programs. The Internet falls in this same category. The American people paid for the research and all facets of the Internet and it belongs to the people. That means that I have the right to tell you that my preference is to include the Internet in the category of Common Carrier and therefore make it open to the people and make it illegal for corporations to play with our communications and play havoc with our lives because it ~~makes~~ a few more pennies for them.

It is important that this proposal coming up be accomplished for the people and not to allow the corporations to play their arbitrary games with peoples' lives as will become the case should this vote go against the people.

Please don't let that happen. You have been entrusted with a huge, huge part of our lives—please don't destroy the people by using our own commons against us.

Sincerely,

Michal K. DiClemente
